INTRODUCTION

The aim of this selected guide is to identify basic resources that will best serve the needs of students and faculty involved in area studies programs and international studies at Indiana University. The guide is not meant to be comprehensive; rather, it is representative of the most useful sources currently available in print and on the World Wide Web.

There are nine chapters, each following the same format, with print guides listed first, followed by sources on the Web. All lists are in alphabetical order by author or organization or Web site name. Within each section, the major sources are listed first and are annotated. These are followed by additional non-annotated sources. The World Wide Web sources are listed by site names and URLs. As with the print sources, major Web sites are annotated, followed by additional Web sites without annotation. We hope that by presenting the print guides and Web sources together in a single document that users of this guide will be able to see the larger picture of what is available and what is still lacking.

This Guide is not intended as a comprehensive, all inclusive listing of resources in the field of international and area studies. There may well be more important guides or Web sites that we have missed. We therefore welcome any comments or suggestions from our readers regarding the changes or additions which would make this guide more useful.

GUIDES TO INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

In this chapter are listed guides and Web sites that are related to the study and teaching of global studies in a general sense. The guides are a good place to start with for finding information about international organizations, regional organizations such as the European Union, World Bank and Organization of African Unity, global development and trade, and education. Also included are guides that identify international documents, sources of global data, and international legal materials.

The Web sites provide information about general sites that are related to the study of international affairs. Some of the sites are useful for finding information about specific world areas or countries. Some sites for global studies programs are also included. We have included the Web site for the Center for the Study of Global Change: http://www.indiana.edu/~world

Guides

Cook, Chris. The Facts on File World Political Almanac. 3rd ed. New York: Facts on File, 1995. 536p.
D843 .C5797 1995 UNDERGRADUATE
This single volume reference book attempts to assemble the key facts and figures on the major political developments since World War II. It includes information on international political organizations, heads of state and governments, constitutions and legislatures, treaties and agreements, polical parties, elections, and population. The volume includes a biographical dictionary and dictionary of political terms, events, and actions.

Kurian, George. Global Data Locator. Lanham, MD: Bernan Press, 1997. 375p.
HA36 .K87 1997 GOVPUBS RESERVE
This volume identifies the most important general global statistical sourcebooks available in print. It also identifies statistical sourcebooks by subject that are available in print, as well as electronic databases, including CD-ROMs, online, and on tape. There are a list of publications by publishers and an index of publications by title.

Levinson, David and Karen Christensen. The Global Village Companion: An A-to-Z Guide to Understanding Current World Affairs. Santa Barbara, CA: ABC-Clio, 1996. 438p.
D419 .L47 1996 RESEARCH COLLECTIONS
This volume is a good starting place to find information about concepts and terms related to global studies. The volume includes over four hundred entries that describe over one thousand terms. In addition to individual definitions the entries give historical and global significance of concepts. The work includes a detailed subject index, maps, and upper appendixes of countries, major international documents, and a chronology.

Web Sites

Area Studies Resources: IAN Web Resources

http://info.pitt.edu/~ian/resource/area.htm

This web site, organized by the International Affairs Network, is a concise listing of area studies. It is arranged alphabetically by area and also has sections for related links. Other important sections of the overall site include individual countries, international organizations, primary documents and university centers.

Canadian Institute of International Affairs Links to Other Sites on International Relations

http://www.ciia.org/links.htm

This extensive set of links to Internet sites on international relations is maintained by the Canadian Institute of International Affairs. Includes links to sites related to conference and meetings, electronic publications, educational programs, and organizations.

Global Resources Web Project

http://www.duke.edu/~frykholm/global3.htm

This new site, part of a project by the Association of Research Libraries and Association of American Universities, is the beginning of an inventory of the best web sites on all regions of the world. The site is meant to be a clearing house to provide links to online resources and identify institutions abroad that offer access to global sources. This is an excellent listing of sites for anyone interested in area studies programs.

International and Area Studies

http://www.clark.net/pub/lschank/web/country.html

Excellent starting point for identifying sites related to area studies and international affairs, including topics such as human rights, peace studies, and political affairs. These pages include links to the major international organizations as well.

International Relations Internet Sites: University of British Columbia Library

Bibliographies

Bopp, Mary S. Research in Dance: A Guide to Resources. New York: Maxwell Macmillan International, 1994. 296p.
Z7514.D2 B6 1994 RESEARCH COLLECTIONS, HPER LIBRARY
A comprehensive reference guide to dance information in both electronic and print form. Covering all forms of dance as well as the other work of the dancer/choreographer-activities that include teaching classes in dance history, anthropology, or philosophy, writing reviews and essays, or conducting studies in dance kinesiology. All types of sources are cited: publications, and sources for book and performance reviews. The focus is on English-language sources.

Gray, John. African Music: A Bibliographical Guide to the Traditional, Popular, Art and Liturgical Musics of Sub-Saharan Africa. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1991. 499p.
ML120.A35 G7 1991 RESEARCH COLLECTIONS, AAC LIBRARY
A reference tool that provides information on a large body of both major and obscure sources of various genres of African music. This guide is devoted to ethnographic, anthropological, musicological, and popular studies of Sub-Saharan African music from the 1890s to the present. The bibliography is organized into six basic sections. The items cited range from books, dissertations, unpublished papers, and periodical and newspaper articles, to films, videotapes, and audiotapes in all of the major Western languages as well as several African ones. The three appendixes deal, respectively, with reference works on African music and culture; archives and research centers; and a selected discography listing both traditional and popular music recordings and outlets where they may be found. Four indexes, ethnic group, subject, artist and author, complete the work and provide a key to its five thousand eight hundred entries.

Mieder, Wolfgang. Proverbs in World Literature: A Bibliography. New York: P. Lang, 1996. 305p.
Z6514.P76 M535 1996 RESEARCH COLLECTIONS
This bibliography contains two thousand six hundred fifty four entries. The first two hundred eighty four entries are related to general studies. Proverb dictionaries based on texts collected from literary works, books and articles about numerous authors, studies of the interrelationship of proverbs and folk, and theoretical writings on the integration and function of proverbs in literature in general are listed here. The second part of the bibliography is arranged alphabetically according to the last name of the literary author whose proverbial usage has been investigated. Anonymous works are also listed alphabetically. A name index of the scholars cited appears at the end. Extensive materials from many languages and cultures are collected and organized. The bibliography includes not only proverb studies regarding the major authors of world literature, but also those investigations that deal with regional writers.

GLOBAL RESOURCES AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Guides

Katz, Linda S. Environmental Profiles: A Global Guide to Projects and People. New York: Garland, 1993. 1083p.
GE1 .K38 1993 BUSINESS/SPEA
This book describes how, why and where environmental efforts have been conducted, and who was responsible for making them work. The information here came mostly from two sets of surveys sent to the over five thousand individuals and organizations that are documented in an alphabetical list of one hundred and fifteen countries. The sections are further subdivided by type of organization i.e. Government, NGO, Private, University. An index, appendix, and list of abbreviations and acronyms provide ease of navigation for this source.

Pennell, Allison A. ed. Business and the Environment: A Resource Guide. Washington, DC: Island press, 1992. 364p.
HD69 .P6 P46 1992 BUSINESS/SPEA
This book is divided according to its two purposes; the first section provides information on accessing key publications on business and the environment, and the second section lists the major educators in the field, including a biographical sketch and a list of publications. Indexed by countries, key word, subject headings, author, educator and university. Good source to refer to when looking for graduate programs; the list of active researchers and contact information can be a valuable lead.

World Bank. The Environmental Data Book: A Guide to Statistics on the Environment and Development. Washington, DC: World Bank, 1993. 16p.
GE140 .E59 1993 GOVPUBS RESERVE
This volume provides measures of environmental, economic, and social conditions in developing countries. Divided into four sections, water, land, air, atmosphere. It presents statistics on countries with populations of more than one million. Statistics are given in tabular and graphical formats, including by maps of the world. Includes glossary.

Environmental Research Resources
http://darkwing.uoregon.edu/~rmitchel/envres.shtml

Created by Ronald Mitchell, political science professor at the University of Oregon. List of links arranged by topic on environmental organizations and issues.

Global Change Master Directory
http://gcmd.gsfc.nasa.gov/

NASA puts together this directory of information about earth science data, including broad coverage of the oceans, atmosphere, hydrosphere, solid earth, biosphere and human dimensions of global change. Provides a search engine and keyword lists for searching. Also provides a conference calendar, documentation and software, and links to Earth Sciences Web sites.

Global Climate Information Project
http://www.climatefact.org/

Focuses on the economic implications of climate science on American consumers. Presents arguments on the latest UN treaties dealing with pollution.

Global Energy Marketplace
http://gem.crest.org

This is a searchable database of more than two thousand five hundred energy efficiency and renewable energy annotated Web links that has been sponsored by the US Environmental Protection Agency and created by CREST (Center for Renewable Energy and Sustainable Technology).

GNET: The Environmental Technology, Business, and Clean-up Network
http://www.gnet.org

Provides current information on recent environmental events features and not featured in the news. Has a search engine and an index to articles.

Global Warming International Center: GWIC
http://www.globalwarming.net

The Global Warming International Center is the international body disseminating information on global warming science and policy, serving both governmental, non-governmental organizations, and industries in more than one hundred twenty countries. It sponsors unbiased research supporting the understanding of global warming and its mitigation.

International Institute for Natural, Environmental and Cultural Resources Management
http://www.nmsu.edu/~iirm/

Provides information from New Mexico State University's College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

International Institute for Sustainable Development: IISDnet http://iisd1.iisd.ca/

The International Institute for Sustainable Development contains information about the environment, the economy and the well-being of people. Contains information about IISD publications and links to multimedia resources for environmental and development policy makers.

Institute of Global Environment and Society: IGES

http://www.iges.org/

The Institute of Global Environment and Society is dedicated to basic research in climate variability, climate predictability and climate change. It has been established to improve understanding and prediction of the variations of the earth's climate through scientific research, and to share both the fruits of this research and the tools necessary to carry out this research with society as a whole. Current weather patterns and events are highlighted along with other research topics on this site.

National Water and Climate Center

http://www.wcc.nrcs.usda.gov

Traver, James D., ed. Urbanization in Africa: A Handbook. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1994. 484p.
HT384.A35 U73 1994 BUSINESS/SPEA, RESEARCH COLLECTIONS
This reference work provides a summary of historical and contemporary aspects of urbanization in Africa. The volume is organized in three parts. The first provides a historical overview of urbanization in Africa from ancient civilizations to the present day. The second provides detailed studies of urbanization in fifteen highly urbanized African countries. Each chapter in this section is devoted to one country, and the chapters are arranged alphabetically for convenient access. Countries profiled are located in different regions of the continent, and each has an urban population of at least five hundred thousand people. The third part of the volume includes chapters on topics of special importance to African urbanization, such as economics and demographics. The chapters are written by expert contributors and provide current references. The volume concludes with a selected bibliography.

GUIDE TO OVERSEAS OPPORTUNITIES

This guide includes printed sources for finding information about international careers, study abroad and internship opportunities. In each category there are two alphabetized listings of directories, guides and sourcebooks. The first listing provides the best sources, which have been annotated. Following the annotated works is the second listing of additional sources. Each entry includes the author, title, place, publisher, date, pages, call number and location. Most of the items were published in the 1990's, but there are some from the 1980's. While those items may be somewhat out of date, they still contain valuable information. If you know of any new books please notify Bob Goehlert, Library E-860 (812-855-1609 / goehlert@indiana.edu) and he will have the library order them. The locations include various Libraries on the Indiana University campus as well as the Career Development Center at 625 North Jordan Avenue and the Overseas Study Information Center located in 303 Franklin Hall.

There are several offices on campus that also provide information and services about international careers, study abroad and internship opportunities. The Career Development Center, located at 625 North Jordan Avenue (812-855-5234 / http://www.indiana.edu/~career/) houses a Career Resource Library (http://www.indiana.edu/~career/crl/crl.html) which provides resources for career planning and college major exploration. In addition, the Career Development Center contains the Career Counseling Services, the Student Employment Office, Arts & Sciences Placement Office, and the Internship Opportunities Program. There are also six other placement offices on campus including Business, Education, HPER, Journalism, Music and Public & Environmental Affairs.

The Undergraduate Library in the Main Library, located at 10th Street and Jordan Avenue has an excellent Career Reference Collection (812-855-9857 / http://www.indiana.edu/~libugls/career-home.html). Many of the items listed in this guide can be found in the Career Reference Collection in the Undergraduate Library. The Office of Overseas Study, located in 303 Franklin Hall (812-855-9304 / http://www.indiana.edu/~overseas) is the best place on campus for information about study overseas. The Information Center within the Office provides information about all the IU administered overseas study programs, co-sponsored programs, as well as non-IU study abroad programs. The Office also has information about work and volunteer programs abroad in their Resource Room as well as on their web site. As a unit of the Career Development Center, the Internship Opportunities Program is located at 625 North Jordan Avenue (812-855-8208 / http://www.indiana.edu/~career/iop/iop.html). The Program offers workshops, interviewing opportunities, resume referrals and internships listings. The Center for the Study of Global Change has information on its website about international opportunities, including websites on campus and around the world that have information about international careers, study abroad, and internships overseas (http://www.indiana.edu/~world/gl_interopps.html).

OVERSEAS STUDY INFORMATION CENTER
This is a guide to study abroad based on the descriptions given by hundreds of students who recently finished actual study abroad programs. Using these colloquial and subjective descriptions the authors of this book selected the study abroad programs that they felt were most impressive. They then highlighted these programs with a focus on financial aid, living conditions, free time, extra costs, social life, preparation, male/female ratios, faculty, typical days, personal expenses, academics, homestays, structure of program, and environment. The appendix lists programs by country.
